Labor Research Colloquium
A Lecture Series Sponsored by the UO Labor Education & Research Center

“Walmart in China”
February 28th, 2018 • 4 – 5 pm
Eileen Otis, Associate Professor, Department of Sociology

Most Americans think of Walmart as a company that buys goods in China and sells them for cheap in the US. But over the past decade, Walmart has opened hundreds of stores within China itself. Are Wal-Mart’s labor practices better or worse in a nominally communist state with no legal right to organize or protest? How are Chinese workers confronting the world’s largest company?

All lectures in the series will be held at the ERB Memorial Union, Miller Room on the University of Oregon campus.
